

The information below—which is derived from Department of Homeland Security (DHS), Department of State Bureau of International Narcotics and Law Enforcement (INL), U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID), and Inter-American Foundation (IAF) data—is intended to offer context on the location of unaccompanied alien child (UAC) communities of origin and of U.S. agency programs and grantees. The data does not include some program and UAC origin locations due to a lack of specificity in agency documents on these locations. In addition, DHS officials noted that there were certain inherent limitations in the accuracy of DHS apprehension data, which we discuss in our report, Central America: Improved Evaluation Efforts Could Enhance Agency Programs to Reduce Unaccompanied Child Migration, GAO-15-707. Further, the agency programs were not weighted in any way, such as by number of beneficiaries or population served, or by resources allocated to the program location. Moreover, as we note in GAO-15-707, some agency programs are nationwide or not necessarily located in specific municipalities, such as countersmuggling efforts that target border or transit routes or public information campaigns. In GAO-15-707, we present these data aggregated at the department level, rather than by municipality, and in broad ranges, to address and mitigate some of these limitations.
